

Anguilla

Tiny, boho-chic Anguilla has the best dining in the Caribbean, with over 100 multi-starred restaurants. But what really puts it up the list: privacy. Tourism here doesn't happen in hordes or on cruise ships with paparazzi documenting the scene. "Anguilla is not for those seeking validation," said Hon. Cardigan Connor, a parliamentary secretary for tourism, "Our low-key, understated vibe is what attracts our celebrity clientele." (Indeed, among just the 1 percent, the country ranks No.2.) To add to the bliss: the only Turkish hammam in the Caribbean opened recently at the new Zemi Beach House. (Pictured: a fish dish on Sandy's Island, Anguilla.)

Photographer: Etolane/Flickr

