LONDON

Anguilla is considered one of the jewels of the Caribbean for those seeking a beach holiday or some winter sun, and for very good reason.

A jet-setter's paradise and accustomed to the company of a number of high-profile celebrities, it boasts some of the world's best beaches.

Zemi Beach House, the first hotel to be built on the island for six years, has now opened on Shoal Bay East, a two-mile stretch of feathery white sand that is, quite simply, picture perfect.

The resort has been developed by the Goldstein family of New York and features 54 hotel rooms and 50 luxury residences.

Overlooking Shoal Bay's

crystalline waters, each of the guest rooms has a private furnished balcony, where you can watch the sunset every evening (a truly theatrical event in Anguilla) or kick off your sandals and enjoy the warm sea breeze.

The resort has five incredible dining venues. For dinner that's been caught on your doorstep, Stone serves fresh-off-the-boat seafood.

If you're looking for luxury island travel, it doesn't come anymore idyllic than Anguilla.
